Abstract:

The Mount Wollaston Parish Meeting House was established in 1639 in the present-day Quincy Area, and by 1640 the town was renamed Braintree. This Meeting House was the site of the original church, which first gathered on September 10, 1707. In 1708, old Braintree was divided into the North Precinct (Quincy) and the South Precinct (Braintree). When Quincy became an official town in 1792, the 1707 church was designated as the First Church in Braintree. The records in this collection include the journal of Samuel Niles dating 1697 to 1777, a volume of church records dating from 1707-1871, a volume of the Braintree Precinct's Financial Records dating 1708 to 1796, and a volume of church records dating 1790 to 1825.

Historical Note

The first Parish to settle in the Braintree area in 1634 was known as "Mount Wollaston," named after the founder of a trading post in 1624. The Mount Wollaston Parish Meeting House was established in 1639 in the present-day Quincy Area, and by 1640 the town was renamed Braintree. Braintree originally included present-day Braintree, Quincy, Randolph, and Holbrook. The Parish Meeting House was the site of the original church, which first gathered on September 10, 1707. In 1708, old Braintree was divided into the North Precinct (Quincy) and the South Precinct (Braintree). At the time, Braintree was sometimes referred to as "Monatiquot," after the Massachusett Indian village and home of Chief Wompatuck. When Quincy became an official town in 1792, the 1707 church was designated as the First Church in Braintree. Over the years, the church has been known as the First Congregational Church, Christ Church, and the Church of the Presidents. The first ministers of the church included Hugh Adams (ordained 1707), Samuel Niles (ordained 1711), and Ezra Weld (ordained 1762).

Title/Description Instances

Samuel Niles journal, 1697-1777

Scope and Contents

The entries in this journal, dating from 1697 to 1777, document the Pastor, Samuel Niles', thoughts and activities within the church as well as the organizational and membership history of the First Congregational church of Braintree. The journal includes entries regarding the Covenant of Redemption, the Episcopacy, the Godhead of the Christ, the Protestant Power, the Papal Power, the 1665 plague in London, and the Pastor's work, "A Prospect of Death- A Pindarique Essay," written on March 19, 1721. Also included in the entries is the Pastor's own account of his birth, wives, children, marriages, and ordination.

The volume also includes records of the marriages, baptisms, and members admitted into communion, which the Pastor oversaw. On page 48, there is a written history of Samuel Niles. The records also include the Abington church covenant that was in place during Niles' ministry, records of burials near the Braintree church meeting house, Niles' financial account with the church and a list of the Churches of Christ living in December of 1777.

Although the journal does not include mention of the Stamp Act, the son of the journal's author, Deacon Samuel Niles, was the chairman of a committee of five from Braintree enlisted to draft instructions for the townspeople to react to the Act in 1765. This committee commissioned John Adams "to draft the documents recounting the freedoms expected by American colonists," which became the Braintree Instructions. Forty more Massachusetts towns endorsed the Braintree Instructions, a precursor of the American Revolution. The Stamp Act was repealed a year later in the spring of 1766.

Financial records, 1708-1796

Scope and Contents

The records in this volume document the financial and organizational history of the Braintree District from 1708 to 1796. The records include the Precinct's meeting minutes, financial records, bills of credit and credit payments. Meeting minutes include discussion to build the new Precinct meeting house, beginning on page 82, a list of citizens who bought the thirty-six pews of the new meeting house on pages 93-94, and a report of the Precinct lines being drawn on page 128.

The different names used to refer to the Precinct within the records also reflect the evolution of the Braintree region. From pages 1 to 24 the area is referred to as the "South Precinct," from pages 25 to 27 it is referred to as "the South or Middle precinct", from pages 28 to 192 it is referred to as the "Middle Precinct," from pages 193 to 200 it is referred to as the "First Precinct, formerly the Middle Precinct," and from page 201 onward the region is referred to as the "Braintree Precinct."

Church records, 1707-1871

Scope and Contents

This bound volume comprises the earliest church records, with some apparently copied from a previous version, as well as later records continuing to 1871. The front cover label on the volume reads: "Copy of Older Record Book and Dr. Storrs' Record Book." It contains meeting minutes, lists of members, baptisms, marriages, deaths, a copy of the church covenant, and copies of official correspondence.

Church records, 1790-1825

Scope and Contents

Two sets of records were kept within this volume, and are presented here consecutively for ease of use. The first set of records includes lists of the church's minsters and members, covenants, and meeting minutes. The second set of records contains lists of baptisms, marriages, deaths, and admissions to the church. This volume is stated to be a direct continuation of Samuel Niles's Journal, which he originally took with him to Abington when he left this church.
