Abstract: The Congregational Home Missionary Society provided financial assistance for congregations that could not afford to support their own minister. They also engaged in missionary activities in locations such as states west of the Mississippi, the southern Ohio River region, Black churches in northern cities, and foreign-speaking churches. The CHMS came out of the American Home Missionary Society, which was a multi-denominational organization started in 1826 to assist congregations that are unable to support the gospel ministry, and to send the gospel to the destitute within the United States. By 1893, the Congregationalists made up most of the organization so the name was changed to Congregational Home Missionary Society. This collection contains various letters, notes, and financial information related to the outreach and the daily work conducted by the Congregational Home Missionary Society.
