Abstract:	The Wollaston Congregational Church in Wollaston, Quincy, MA was formed from the Wollaston Congregation Society in 1876 with its church building being dedicated that same year. As the church grew, it purchased a parsonage in 1891, built a parish house in 1915, and replaced the original church building with a new one in 1926. The church was renovated in the 1960s, 2009, and 2018 to improve its facilities and ensure the historic preservation of the church building. The church reached its high point in the 1950s and 1960s before continuously declining in both membership and finances even though there were efforts to improve throughout the years, specifically in 2007 with Rev. Gifford's turnaround ministry. However, the church continued to decline and voted to become a legacy church in 2024 with the building sold to the city of Quincy and the last service taking place December 15, 2024. The collection contains records relating to the administration, history, members, and activities of Wollaston Congregational Church including programs, scrapbooks, financial records, minutes, reports, audiovisual material, photos, legal records, building records, correspondence, vital statistics, and other documents.

Historical Note

The Wollaston Congregational Church in Wollaston, Quincy, MA was formed from the Wollaston Congregational Society which was organized in November 1874. In 1875, the Ladies Benevolent Society was formed, and construction began on a church building with the cornerstone laid in October 1875. In 1876, the Sunday school started at the beginning of the year. Also in 1876, the church was officially recognized by an ecclesiastical council in May with the building being dedicated at the same time and Rev. Francis Zabriskie being the first pastor. As the church grew, they were able to build a parsonage on Marion St in 1891 and a parish house in 1915. In 1925, the church voted to build a new building with the old building being destroyed, and the cornerstone of the new building was laid June 1925. Construction finished on the new church building in 1926 with a dedication in March and the stained-glass memorial window dedicated separately in October 1926. In 1951, the church celebrated 75 years and burned its mortgage as part of the festivities. In the 1960s, the church joined the United Church of Christ in 1960 and organized and completed a renovation of the Sunday school and gym facilities between 1962 and 1966. After the 1950s and 1960s, the church's membership and finances began to decline and could not regain the highest numbers seen previously.

Entering the 21st century, membership and finances continued to spiral downward. In 1998 and 1999, the church sold the land surrounding it. In 2007, the church decided to become a turnaround church under Rev. Mary Louise Gifford in hopes of combating the decline so that the church could remain open and prosperous. This change came with a change in church governance to a board of stewards which replaced the previous council that had replaced the administrative committees a few years earlier. In 2008, the church building was listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and in both 2009 and 2018, the church underwent renovations to ensure the historic preservation of the building. As the 2000s continued, the membership and finances declined further until the church voted to become a legacy church in January 2024. The church sold the building to the city of Quincy at the end of 2024 to be used as a community center. On December 15, 2024 the church held its last service and officially closed.
